

Your Bucket List

When creating your bucket list, make sure you take into account the amount of time you have available to you to complete as many things as possible.

Start today! Take action! There will never be another "now".

Involve your loved ones whenever possible and start building happy memories.

Important considerations:

How reliable is your health?

What financial flexibility do you have?

If you have a life insurance policy, with a terminal illness, you can sometimes free up the policy early.

Consider these in your list:

Countries, landmarks, historical sites to visit

Experiences you want to take part in

Activities you want to experience

Friends and family you want to visit

Write your personal history

Identify people on old photos whose names may be forgotten

Deepen your spiritual connections

Explore different faiths

Address wrongs that need to be righted

Explore a new hobby or challenge

Plant a tree

Create your own product

Write a book or journal

Write letters to your loved ones to be found after you've died

For an inspiring list of ideas to add to your bucket list, take a look at this link:

<http://bucketlistjourney.net/my-bucket-list/>

Most importantly, enjoy yourself, have fun and enjoy the process.

Get out there and start embracing life.